Konnect Junior Golf School

A weekly coaching program for young golfers who want to learn the game the right way, from the start. Each class is capped at six juniors with one dedicated coach, so every swing is seen and every player gets individual attention.

Program lead Elliot Bogdonovich

THE FIRST STEP ON THE KONNECT PATHWAY

The Junior Golf School is the entry point to Konnect's player development pathway. Juniors who show commitment and progress may be invited into the Konnect Elite Junior Academy, our program for high school players preparing for college golf.

Meet the coaches

Elliot Bogdonovich, Program Lead

Elliot coaches young golfers at Horace Mann and Trinity School and has helped coach camps at Asphalt Green, so he knows how to make the game click for kids. He is a PGA Associate who came to golf after playing semi-professional baseball, and today plays to a scratch handicap in national mid-amateur events. For nearly 20 years he has studied both the mechanics and the mental side of the game. He builds sound fundamentals around each player's own body and abilities, rather than forcing every swing into one model, so a 6-year-old beginner and a competitive 12-year-old each get coaching that fits them.

Luke Sample

He learned the game in this building.

Luke started as a junior at Konnectgolf, became the youngest Met Open champion in history at 17, played four straight U.S. Amateurs, and led Duke in scoring average twice. Now a professional, he's back where it began, coaching the next group of Konnect juniors and leading additional Sunday sessions.

What juniors learn

Full swing

Grip, setup, posture and a repeatable motion, built correctly from the start before bad habits set in.

Short game and putting

Chipping, pitching and green reading. This is where scores are made, and it's the part most junior programs skip.

Trackman-guided feedback

Juniors see their ball speed, launch and shot shape on every swing, and learn to understand their own ball flight.

Playing the game

Simulated rounds on championship courses teach club selection, course management and decision-making.

The complete player

Practice habits, focus, composure and discipline, plus the etiquette and rules that carry from the first tee into their adult lives.

Instruction is tailored to each player's age and level, so a first-time 6-year-old and an experienced 11-year-old both make real progress every session.
